Assessors Scheduling Hearings

At mid-day yesterday Assessor William Russell was predicting that by closing time his staff would have scheduled appointments for more than 125 Andover taxpayers who want to make inquiries or enter complaints about new assessments released by the Board of Assessors last Friday following completion of a town-wide tax equalization study.

With notices to property owners the board also released the news that the 1967 tax rate will be $25., down from the $33 rate of last year and $11 less than the '67 budget would have permitted had previous assessments been maintained.

Russell said that the equalization study produced an estimated increase of $50 million in total

Christian Science Church Is Opening New Building

A new church building will open its doors to the public in Andover on Sunday, June 4. First Church of Christ, Scientist, Andover, moves into its new edifice on that day, with services at 10:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The church has been under construction since last July at 278 North Main Street (Route 28) near Shawheen Center.

Although this is their first building, the Christian Science church of Andover has been organized and holding services for the past 15 years, in the November Club on Locke Street. Committee and board meetings were conducted in the church's Reading Room, currently located at 1 Main St. The group is a fully recognized branch of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

The site for the new edifice was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius A. Wood. The building, designed by Royal Barry Wills Associates, is of the traditional New England Colonial style for which this firm is widely recognized. It is of white clapboard construction and has a slender spire and pillared portico. The spire, which is made of molded fibre glass and rises to a height of 72 feet, will be spotlighted from the grounds at night.

Two driveways provide access from the street, one to a parking area at the rear and the other to a turnaround circle at the main entrance. This turnaround is bordered by a number of large trees, the architect having taken care to fit the building to the land with minimum disturbance of the natural beauty of the site. Also on the grounds is a small pond to the west of the building.

Although early American in design, the new church is equipped for every modern need. The auditorium, seating 160, is lighted by sunken spotlights in the ceiling and by hand-crafted polished brass sconces on the walls. These carry out the beauty of old Colonial

The Selectmen have scheduled a hearing for June 12 to take measure of the attitude of residents on Highland Road to the request of Segadelli Construction Co. for permission to tie an apartment development just across the North Andover line into the Andover sewage system.

The contractor has expressed a willingness to contribute toward the cost of enlarging existing sewage lines to handle the load, along with an annual rental fee.

The town manager reports that improvements to the sewer lines in that area will have to be made eventually, but he advised the Selectmen to take stock of the reaction of property owners in the area to an apartment development nearby. Apparently Sagadelli can not proceed with his apartment plans, unless he can make sewage arrangements with Andover.

Hughes House Nursing Home of Andover has been certified by the Social Security Administration as Extended Care Facilities in the Medicare program, according to an announcement from the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes Inc.

William J. Norkunas, 93 Main St., was arraigned and pleaded not guilty May 24 to the charge that he tried to steal a $503 calculating machine on May 9 from the IRS North Atlantic Service Center on Lowell St. and attacked an employee who interfered. The case was continued for hearing.

The Greater Lawrence Regional Vocational-Technical High School will graduate its first class June 9 at 6 p.m. on the campus in front of the school. There are 58 students in the senior class.

A total of 1,995 Andover residents were receiving monthly Social Security benefits totaling $152,379 at the end of 1966, according to a report issued from the bureau's administrative office in Lawrence last week.

Rev. Francis L. Sullivan, pastor of St. Robert Bellarmine Church, will retire July 1 after 32 years service as an ordained priest. A native of North Andover, Father Sullivan has been pastor of the West Andover Church since its opening in 1961.

ABC Begins Two Drives

In addition to the $50,000 three-year fund-raising program that is currently going on for the Andover Committee for A Better Chance, a Dormitory Furnishings Drive is being held under the direction of Mrs. Samuel Rogers and Mrs. Adair Miller.

Many items have already been contributed to furnish the recently purchased dormitory at 134 Main St., but according to Mrs. Rogers, the following items are still needed; in ready-to-use condition: restaurant-size cooking utensils, cutlery - flatware, electric kitchen appliances, deep freeze, large refrigerator, washing machine.

PA In On Study

The Carnegie Foundation has awarded a $69,000 grant to Phillips Academy in Andover, Phillips Exeter Academy, the Hill School, and Lawrenceville Academy to make a one year study of the "desirability and feasibility of a significant change in the structure and function of the four independent schools."

Prep Schools Contemplate Change

The study will attempt to determine the validity of combining the 11th and 12th grades of secondary education at the four schools with the first two years of college. This investigation was recommended by the headmasters of the four schools because of the growing conviction that the "traditional division at the end of grade 12 between school and college bears little relationship to academic developments of the past several years."

The committee is concerned with the duplication of courses in early college years and also with the trend to earlier specialization which undermines the concept of a broad general education. College admissions pressures with their "adverse effect upon both the academic and emotional growth of students from these schools" was another consideration in the committee's proposal to the Foundation.

Various alternatives will be evaluated in the study, which begins this summer. 1. That the four schools become junior colleges, grades 11-14 and award an AB degree in general education at the end of grade 14. Graduates would go on to graduate and professional schools or terminate their education. Grades 9 and 10 would be dropped.

2. That the four schools collectively establish a junior college "that will exist apart from the present schools and into which will feed all or part of the graduating classes of the four schools." Faculties from the sponsoring schools would help staff the college which would also serve as a base for experimentation with ways of strengthening the role of the junior college in the East.

3. That grade 12 be eliminated and substituted by a year off for work or military service followed by junior college experience.

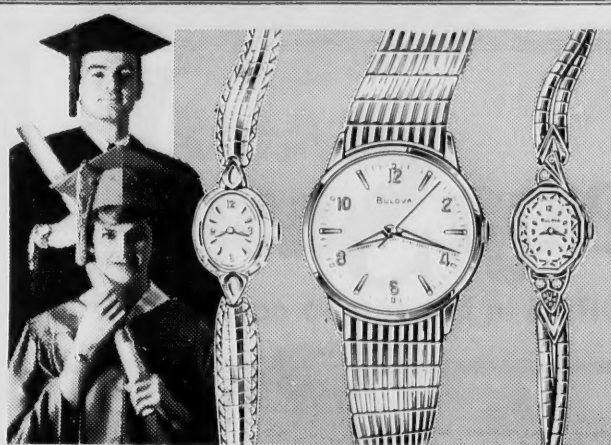

4. That having eliminated grade 12, the four schools will substitute a year of work or military service prior to recommendation of their graduates to four year colleges and universities.

5. That the four schools send all or some of their students to college at the end of grade 11.

The study committee includes the headmasters of the four schools and four faculty members, one from each school. In addition, there will be a full-time director; and the grant also provides funds for consultants from junior colleges, graduate schools, four year colleges and feeder schools to the four independent secondary schools.

Hockey Vote Is Delayed

The School Committee has asked Athletic Director Donald Dunn to spell out in greater detail June 6 his reasons for recommending that Andover replace its present intramural hockey program with a varsity program for the next school year.

Some committee members expressed particular interest last week in knowing if the switch to a varsity program would deprive some who are interested in the sport of the opportunity to participate.

Committeeman Frederick Fitzgerald told the board that he believed Dunn's request is based on Dunn's belief that he can staff a varsity hockey team from boys not involved with other major sports in the hockey season.

But Chairman Louis Galbiati and others on the committee favored tabling a decision on the hockey request until it could be learned how the number of students interested in intra-mural hockey compares with those interested in a varsity program.

Birders Spot 60 Species On Final Walk Of Season

Twenty-three birders recorded a near high record of 60 species on the final early morning walk of the Merrimack Valley Bird Club at High Plain Rd. and Haggett's Pond on Sunday. The leader was Mrs. Waters Kellogg of Andover, and the sub-leader was Oscar M. Root of North Andover.

Birds sighted seemed torpid at first, in a 40-degree temperature, but they became active as the day grew warmer. Noticeable was the scarcity of vireos and flycatchers, ascribed to the scarcity of insects, whose development has been retarded by the cold, wet spring. Undeveloped foliage aided in observation.

Observers were: Mrs. Per Bro, Herbert Clark, Robert Crowley, Miss Colleen Crowley, Miss Deborah Crowley, Mrs. Alice Dolan, Miss Doris Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Duxbury, Mrs. Dudley Fitts, Kenneth Folsom, Thomas Juarez, Daniel J. Keleher, Mrs. Waters

Kellogg, Miss Beulah Nason, Mrs. Leslie Packard, Richard Packard, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rees, Oscar M. Root, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whinn, A. M. Wilson.

Birds observed: green heron 2, Canada goose 2, mallard 1, black duck 4, wood duck 2, ruffed grouse 1, pheasant 2, spotted sandpiper 1, herring gull 25, mourning dove 1, chimney swift 6, kingfisher 1, flicker 2, downy wood pecker 1, phoebe 2, least flycatcher 1, cliff swallow 1, blue jay 6, crow 2, chickadee 2, white-breasted nuthatch 2, house wren 2, catbird 8, brown thrasher 2, robin 12, veery 2, starling 12, red-eyed vireo 1, warbling vireo 1, black and white warbler 6, Tennessee warbler 3, parula warbler 4, yellow warbler 6, Magnolia warbler 2, Blackburnian warbler 2, chestnut-sided warbler 6, bay-breasted warbler 1, black-poll warbler 1, oven-bird 1, northern water-thrush 3, yellow-throat 8, Canada warbler

1, redstart 6, house sparrow 5, bobolink 2, meadowlark 2, red-wing 25, Baltimore oriole 10, grackle 30, cowbird 2, scarlet tanager 2, rose-breasted grosbeak 2, purple finch 2, goldfinch 12, towhee 6, swamp sparrow 1, song sparrow 4, tree swallow 10, bank swallow 12, barn swallow 25, Total 60, Individuals 308.

Handiwork Exhibited

Some favorite types of feminine handiwork for the period in history spanning most of the 19th century will be on exhibition at the Amos Blanchard House, 97 Main St., from June 2 through June 23. Early Samplers, beaded bags, Victorian needlepoint and "Berlin work" from the Andover Historical Society's collections will be on display. lighting without its limitations, for they can be dimmed or brightened as the need dictates. During the day, the auditorium is lighted by six tall many-panel windows, which will not be curtained.

Interior walls of auditorium and foyer, balcony and committee room are a warm white, contrasting attractively with the bright crimson of the wall-to-wall carpeting and pew cushions. Pews, readers' desks, and platform railings are white with natural mahogany trim.

To the rear of the platform are dressing rooms for readers and soloists. At the basement level is a Sunday School room which can accommodate 125 pupils and nursery facilities for infants and pre-school children who are brought by parents attending the services on Sunday.

A two-manual Allen electronic organ is the musical instrument for the church.

Construction financing was furnished jointly by the Andover Savings Bank of Andover and the Essex Savings Bank of Lawrence. The contractor was C.B. Westgate & Son, Inc., of Medford, Mass. The cornerstone was laid on September 10, 1966.

Services at the church will be held regularly throughout the year on Sundays at 10:30 a.m., with Sunday School at the same hour. There is also a weekly Wednesday evening meeting at 8 o'clock, which includes a period when individual members offer testimonies of healing through Christian Science.

On the opening Sunday, only one Sunday School session will be held - at 10:30 a.m., although nursery facilities will be available during both services that day. The church will remain open to visitors between the services.

This opening day is not the dedication of the church, church officials explain, since Christian Science churches are not dedicated until they are free from debt.

report that sweaters with matching skirts may be custom ordered and delivered on relatively short order.

A surprising number of the Hay Scales most regular consignors are young mothers who are busy at home with small children. From this group come some of the most popular items. Another makes popovers, aprons with sleeves and buttons on order and still another, turns out a long, skinny dachshund with hooks for keeping pot holders in order.

Nearby there is a shelf with jars of raisin sauce, pear mincemeat and cranberry and apple jelly from New Hampshire kitchen and hung on the opposite wall are plaques showing Revolutionary soldiers and sailors in full uniform.

And if you browse further you can find packages of handblocked writing paper decorated with prehistoric animals; paintings of flowers done on velvet, displayed in antique frames; and a hearth bench that shows a collection of Colonial children at play.

At the hub of the exchange is the food counter where orders for baked beans, (in winter) chicken pies, hors d'oeuvres, special occasion cakes are taken for weddings, birthdays and the like. Here, too, are sold the rum cakes for which the Exchange has a wide reputation, along with fresh pies and such out-of-the-ordinary goodies as lemon wafers, ginger snaps and meringue kisses.

The Hay Scales Exchange was founded by three North Andover women, Mrs. Turner Bridges, Mrs. Horatio Rogers and Mrs. Horace Stevens, but it has always drawn broad support from Andover members and volunteer workers.

The exchange took its name from the first building used as its headquarters, a small white "box" that still stands on the Common. It was built as a public weighing station in 1818 by a combine of 25 North Andover men. And this was all it was until 1924 when Miss Kate Washings Stevens took on the job of weighing, adding the sale of fresh brown bread, a few antiques and the operation of a small lending library as sources of revenue.

The Exchange outgrew this location within two years of its founding, which prompted the move to the present building on Johnson Street.

A week ago the Hayscales Exchange held its annual meeting and elected an Andover woman, Mrs. Robert L. V. French, president.

On her executive board are the following women: Mrs. John C. Bloom, vice president; Mrs. C. Baker Clotworthy, 2nd vice president; Mrs. Frederic P. Worthen, and vice president; Mrs. Robert W. Sides, secretary; Mrs. Adair Miller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. John R. D. McClintock, assistant treasurer; and treasurer, Mrs. Harry Axelrod, who is in the second year of a two-year term. Editorial Comment

Too Great A Risk?

In the years since President John F. Kennedy was shot down in Dallas, Texas with a weapon readily available to his assassin through a Chicago mail order house, U. S. gun manufacturers and aficionados have been doing battle with those inspired by this tragedy to demand tight Federal controls on the distribution and use of firearms.

Attempting to diminish public enthusiasm for a stringent measure, the National Rifle Association of America has made much of the citizen's Constitutional right to keep and bear arms in a way that has tended to obscure the fact that the amendment stipulating this right was designed to guarantee the availability of a "well regulated Militia" in a neophyte nation rather than to encourage the hunters and competitive marksmen of the 20th Century.

Nevertheless, the position of the National Rifle Association is valid to the extent that it suggests the need for arms control legislation that will not, in the words of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, "deprive, or even interfere with the American sportsman or his right to take to the field to hunt or match his skills against others."

In its zeal for protecting the right of Americans to bear arms, however, the NRA has gone a step further, advising readers of its national magazine through a recent bylined report that it is their right also to be armed for protection from violence and suggesting that crime could be checked significantly if homeowners were in a position to confront intruders with an impressive weapon.

It is a tempting proposal, and entirely legal but without dangerous implications. It is true that the incidence of crime is alarming and that the law abiding citizen sometimes seems at the mercy of the lawless who are so adept at circumventing the restrictions of justice. But before we encourage a resurgence of the pioneer spirit, it would be well to consider that the cure could be just as deadly as the disease.

If we could be certain that every citizen who armed himself would be intelligent, prudent, temperate, skillful with fire arms and slow to provoke, we could suggest without reservation that homeowners join the police in the fight against lawlessness by keeping a rifle or pistol within easy reach.

But there can be no such certainty.

We live in a highly urban society where the potential for violence is enormous. Do we want to risk enlarging that potential by suggesting that a substantial segment of the general public arm itself?

It seems too great a risk if you think for a moment how frequently tempers flare and how faulty judgments can be on occasion.

It seems too great a risk if you recall that as recently as two weeks ago a father in one of our major cities fired at a shadow when he was awakened in the night by a noise at his apartment door. The "intruder" he felled and killed with that one shot was his own 13-year-old son who had left his bed because he heard the family dog bark to be let out.

Compact Comment

A couple of weeks ago a group of players broke through a barrier, ignored an array of "No Trespassing" signs and proceeded with an informal ball game on fields at the site of the new senior high school.

They not only destroyed public property (posts and chains) to gain access to the property, but they jeopardized contractual arrangements with the company responsible for putting the play fields in condition for eventual acceptance by the town.

Typical of the irresponsible behavior of youth these days, you say? Not this time. Onlookers estimated the trespassers to be between the ages of 20 and 30.

What Our Readers Say

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN
The Andover Society would like to take this opportunity to thank the people of the Andover area for their overwhelming support of our annual Clown Town, which was held on Saturday, May 20. The combination of the hard work of our members, and the children and parents who attended, made it the most successful Clown Town we have ever had.

Mrs. Robert D. Fitzgerald
Publicity Chairman

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN
We are always grateful to those who contribute in any way towards the successful operation of our Andover Red Cross Bloodmobile visits, and we want to thank all those who had any part in last week's Bloodmobile - not only the 283 blood donors, but the volunteer workers who staffed the bloodmobile, recruited the donors and handled the publicity, including the excellent Townsman page underwritten by a group of Andover business concerns.

On Asia, Disarmament, News Coverage

Erwin Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, a former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and president of the American Society of News Editors appeared before the student body at Phillips Academy on May 19. Following this he made the following comments in an interview with a reporter for the school newspaper, the Philippiian.

Q You have said you are against complete withdrawal from Viet Nam, because of political reasons. Do you think moral considerations ever enter into the question?

A They're part of it. I merely suggested that I didn't think that we should withdraw from Viet Nam on terms which were not fair to the Vietnamese, or which would not constitute a reasonable, decent, balanced, settlement. It may be that our defense of the right of a people to choose their own government is a moral element.

Q Do you think that there are any differences between the moral considerations for the Vietnamese war and those for, say, World War II?

A I don't like to draw a moral cloak over political and military policies. I think that U Thant's viewpoint is terrible, and to try to moralize about national self-interest I think is a dangerous procedure. But I do think that in World War II, the United States and much of the western world was trying to battle aggression that was coupled with a particularly immoral and particularly vicious affront to the rights of men. Racial hatred, anti-semitism, and many other distasteful elements were involved.

I think that the United States has moral purposes in its effort to assist the people of South Viet Nam. I think that we've had to use many tactics which are very distasteful and which we hoped we never would use. I think that our desire to get out on decent or honorable terms has moral elements in it as well. Of course, when we talk about war we probably have to realize that all war has elements of immorality in it anyhow. I don't like to say that there are good wars and bad wars; I'd like to rise above all war. Q Some people do put moral considerations before political and economic?

A Well, yes, but it's been a tendency of our national policy for many years to introduce moral elements into political, economic and foreign situations. I think this is hazardous. I think we should be very careful about moralizing one way or the other - this is a tendency of our nation's younger people. The old world has done far less moralizing. Europeans and some Asians do far less moralizing than we do. I think we should be very careful about the moral issue in any confrontation where political, military, and economic forces are involved.

Q You have said that the balance of nuclear power between the U. S. and Russia acts as a deterrent for either country's interfering in the affairs of smaller nations. Are you therefore against attempts at nuclear disarmament?

A This is a very difficult dilemma. It is conceivable that reduction of the level of nuclear armament might produce a less stable rather than more stable world. This is a risk we ought to be willing to take. But if you have stability at a very high level it makes a lot of weight on one scale or the other to upset the balance. If you have stability at a very low level, just a little difference will upset the balance. So there is something to be said for the peace-preserving effectiveness of force at this present level. But this should not defer us from trying to bring it down, reduce the risks, and so on.

Q What about China? Some people think that China will not act as rationally as the United States, and the Soviet Union if they gain nuclear strength.

A On the record the Chinese have been very restrained and rational during the last twenty years that this present Communist government has been in power. And they have a multitude of internal problems. I see no reason why they should suddenly go off their head. The forces which are struggling for power within Peking now may even inhibit their capacity to indulge in international adventures. So I see no clear evidence to assume that the Chinese will be any less rational than anybody else. The Chinese are the oldest civilization on our planet, and they have not survived by virtue of being irrational.

Q Do you think the differences between the Asian culture and ours will be a great hindrance in making peace negotiations?

A There are certainly very profound differences, and there are very few of us who have any capacity of understanding the working of a Chinese mind. But on the other hand, there are some things which are common to the human race; survival and national well-being are among them. And I think there are unifying forces in the world which transcend the differences of national cultures. One of these unifying forces is the new relationship between man and his physical environment. I think these relationships draw east and west together, in a way that they have never been drawn together before. Q You have said that you think Communism has been a "flap." Do you think that a democratic system would be better than a communist system in impoverished parts of the world? In Asia, for example.

A Well it all depends. The Indians are trying to prove that it is, and some people already have. Japan, at the end of the second World War, was done and out. It was terribly damaged, but it has now developed one of the highest standards of living, and this has been done through democratic forms.

Therefore, I do not exclude the possibility of some kind of representative government being able to meet the needs of a backward people. On the other hand, people can only operate a form of government which is consistent with their own aptitudes, capacities, and needs. Thus, we shouldn't expect governments around the world to be little carbon copies of ours; instead, they will reflect their own capacities.

Q How accurate and comprehensive do you think the reporting has been from Viet Nam?

A I think it has been on the whole remarkably good. There have been a number of very earnest, independent, American correspondents in Viet Nam, and they have, I think, done a very good job. There has been no prior censorship of their copy by the military authorities, and the military have given them a great deal of cooperation. I think it's a misunderstanding to feel that the American public hasn't been told what is going on.

James B. Hammond a graduate of Phillips Academy in 1857, has given a very elegant Hammond type-writer, of which he is the inventor, for use in the Principal's and the Treasurer's offices of the Academy. The machine bears an appropriate inscription.

donors who came and gave blood on Thursday, during a particularly nasty storm. It is so easy under conditions of that sort to justify staying away, and we were afraid practically nobody would come. Therefore to these 137 loyal donors: Our special thanks for your devotion!

Increased blood needs and population growth mean that we will need many new donors for future bloodmobile visits if Andover is to maintain its blood coverage. I hope that the example set by those who came to give blood last Thursday during the vicious storm will serve as inspiration for many more in the future.

The general public is welcome. Refreshments will be served.

Mirtala Bentov, a Russian-born artist whose three years in a Nazi forced labor camp are reflected in her bronze sculptures, is among the Tufts University alumni who will exhibit their works in a special showing at Tufts, May 29 to June 3.

Some 75 pieces of art, including paintings, sculptures, lithographs, woodcuts, and charcoal sketches, will be on display daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Wessell Library on the Medford campus. The exhibition is open to the public free of admission.

An extra concert is being played at the Hammond Museum, Hesperus Avenue, Gloucester, on Friday, June 20th at 8:30 p.m. by Kenneth Wilson, a well-known concert organist and radio performer.

"Nine Canadians," a special exhibition organized by the Institute of Contemporary Art, 100 Newbury St., Boston, has opened in honor of Canada's Centennial.

This is the first Boston exhibition to focus upon contemporary Canadian painting and sculpture. For those who have thought of Canadian art in terms of Eskimo art (ivories, stone carvings, graphics), the ICA exhibition reveals that there are painters and sculptors in Canada today - especially those of Montreal and Toronto - who share international involvement with perceptual painting and reductive form.

The prize-winning Broadway play "The Subject Was Roses" is coming to the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly for a one-week engagement June 19 to 24, prior to the regular summer season at Beverly. Maureen O'Sullivan, Chester Morris, and Walter McEwen, all of whom played the show on Broadway.

Mrs. George Woodrow Drake Jr.

Drake - Buschmann

South Church was the setting May 27 for the marriage of Lola Loraine Buschmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Victor Buschmann of Foster's Pond and George Woodrow Drake Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Currie, also of Foster's Pond, Andover.

Dr. Robert L. Rasche officiated at the ceremony and a reception was held afterward in Fellowship Hall.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an 18th Century summer gown of white organza embroidered delicately with French Chantilly lace. It was styled with an Empire waist, a semi A-line skirt and a sheer, removable train.

With it, she wore a delicate beaded head piece attached to tiers of imported English illusion.

She carried an old fashioned nosegay of white miniature carnations, tea roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and in the heart of the bouquet, a cluster of New England herbs.

Miss Catherine McGrath, Miss Joan Hichens and Miss Patricia Ottaviano were the bride's attendants. They wore gowns of lemon peel organza with bodices trimmed with Venetian lace to the Empire waists. Illusion veils were caught to their matching beaded hats and they carried bouquets of yellow and white roses.

Miss Robin Lee Gilman, who was flower girl, also wore a lemon yellow gown.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Buschmann wore a pale pink, pure silk embossed brocade with tiny pleats of silk around the neck to accent the trimming. Her accessories included a matching hat of draped maline and a corsage of pink cymbidiums.

The bride is a Holiday Magic beauty consultant and the bridegroom is in the U. S. Army.

Following a wedding trip to Houlton, Maine, the couple will live in Amherst, Mass.

Mrs. Jowett Heads Guild

Mrs. Arthur Jowett is the newly elected president of St. Augustine's School Guild.

She was installed following the organization's annual "Living Rosary" recently. Mrs. John Harrigan and Mrs. John Fairburn were co-chairmen for this event.

Other officers for the 1967-68 school year are: Mrs. Edward Walsh, vice president; Mrs. William Driscoll, secretary; Mrs. Harrigan, treasurer; and room mothers, Mrs. Robert Scanlon, Mrs. Leo Hart, Mrs. John Tannet, Mrs. Raymond Carter, Mrs. Joseph Reilly, Mrs. Richard St. Armand, Mrs. Michael Brennan, Mrs. Robert Tassinari and Mrs. Donald Poulin.

Senior Leaguers

Emile Boucher, owner of beautiful Pleasure Lanes, Route 28 in North Reading, feels that in every city, town and village in the United States there are Senior Citizens who have found their role in organized recreation diminishing. Many sports are designed for the younger members of society and as a result, Senior Citizens become less active physically. For this reason, Pleasure Lanes has established a Senior League Program. Register now to participate in league bowling with fellow Seniors in a spirit of good fellowship.

Women can learn to bowl FREE at Pleasure Lanes by registering now for free bowling classes. All classes are kept small and anyone can learn in five easy lessons. For further information, phone 664-2619.

A STORY WELL TOLD - The municipal water department and the Town of Andover received an award last week for the job it did in publicizing the need for the Fish Brook dam. Receiving the trophy at Town Hall ceremonies last week was Water Supt. Donald C. Bassett, far right, along with Philip K. Allen, chairman of the Board of Selectmen. The presentation was made by Vernon C. Russell, chairman of the publicity and advancement award committee of the New England section of the American Waterworks Assn. (Cole)

Fish Brook News Wins Award

Officials of the New England Works Assn. were in Andover last week to present their annual advancement and publicity award to the Andover municipal water department for its success with publicizing the need for and progress with construction of the Fish Brook water project.

Making the presentation was Vernon C. Russell, chairman of the awards committee, and with him were William C. McGuinness, national director for the New England section of AWWA and Ralph M. Soule president of the area division.

real estate valuations, bringing the figure to roughly $158 million.

Two key factors figure in the increase: for one thing, Andover is conforming for the first time to state law which requires that all assessments be made on the basis of "full and fair cash value." For the last 10 years, assessments have been at the rate of 90% of cash value.

And in the second place, fresh values for both land and buildings have been established in the market place since 1958 when the last tax equalization survey was done.

Russell said that the greatest proportional increase since then has been in land values, and this is particularly noticeable in the central business district and in such rapidly developing areas as West Andover. At the time of the 1958 survey, for example, it was difficult to determine the cash value of downtown property because there had been little turnover. In the past two years, however, there has been enough real estate activity in the commercial district to establish values, Russell explained.

In a news release, dated May 27, the Board of Assessors pointed out that the new values it was reporting not only represent current market values in Andover, but are in "accordance with the General Laws of the Commonwealth and recent Supreme Court decisions requiring full and fair cash values."

Andover received the award not only because it undertook a water project of prime significance to the municipal system, but also because it could show with news clips that the value of the improvement to the town was widely publicized.

Clippings of news and feature stories and editorials from the TOWNSMAN dominated the brochure which was prepared for the competition by Water Supt. Bassett. The first of these, discussing the dwindling municipal water supply, the increased demands being made upon Haggetts' Pond and threatening drought con-

The board said that having had a look at assessment figures, along with "cherry" sheet data on estimates for state reimbursements to the Town of Andover, it was approving a 1967 tax rate of $25, one dollar less than it had told taxpayers to expect in a letter sent with re-appraisal figures.

The "cherry" sheet estimates that Andover will receive a total of $1,418,168.88 in reimbursements and distributions from the state this year. Of this total, an estimated $475,547.50 will come from sales and use taxes.

In 1966 Andover received a total of $1,109,707 in funds from the state, $436,532.53 of it from sales and use taxes. The sales tax allotment based on collections for nine months.
